Dear Dr. Henney:

RE: Suppression of Health Info

This letter expresses my concern about the suppression of health information to American citizens by the FDA.

For years the FDA has often prevented manufacturers of health giving products from publishing well supported claims of their benefits. This is a simple violation of the US Bill of Rights and certainly not in the best interest of the population!

If the FDA mission is to promote the health of US citizens, then it should encourage the education of people in the most effective and economical means of maintaining health and recovering from unhealthy situations. Prevention of deficiency diseases by proper choices of diet and exercise is far more economical than subsequent treatment by expensive drugs that usually have serious side effects.

Many natural substances have been known for a long time to promote human health.
Please immediately stop suppressing this info so we can be healthier!!

Sincerely,

Tom Weidenkopf
